CHEATING INVESTIGATIONS

Cheating Investigations don't typically take much time. Statistics show that they probably are if you suspect your partner is cheating. You must listen to your instincts; if you have a gut feeling that they are cheating, you must listen to your intuition. Approximately half of the cheaters leave few, if any, warning signs. The person they are cheating with often coaches them on being careful in getting caught. So, in reality, you are not dealing with the person you think you know. Cheaters are always paranoid about getting caught and take preventive measures to avoid detection and correct mistakes you may have pointed out.

Photographic proof is the only thing that will end the lies and provide you with the necessary closure. Only a skilled investigator can capture photo proof without your partner detecting the investigator. Never try to take matters into your own hands or have a friend or relative attempt to follow your partner; if 1-man PI companies get caught, you or your friends will get caught. Surveillance is a fine art and much more complicated than most people imagine. Following too close will result in detection, and following too loosely will lose observation of your partner. Cheap companies get caught; you do get what you pay for. If a cheap company gets caught, you can rest assured you will not receive a refund. If an investigator gets caught, it will be the worst thing that could ever happen to you. Not only will you be out a whole lot of money, but you will have caused irreparable damage to your relationship, which would be terrible, especially if your partner wasn't even cheating, to begin with. There are no re-dos; if an investigator gets caught, your spouse will forever take precautionary measures to counter any investigator's likelihood of following them. In other words, you will never learn and unveil the truth. You only get one shot at this, so ensure it's done right. Magnum Investigations has provided services for more than 21+ years and specializes in video surveillance; it's all they do. Photo proof will help you immensely by exposing the truth, and as a result, you will be able to decide on what to do next without second-guessing your decision.

CHILD CUSTODY INVESTIGATIONS

Child Custody Investigations are much more complex than Cheating investigations but not nearly as complicated as Alimony/Cohabitation Investigations. Suppose you have children; when you and your partner break up, the Family Court will deem one of you the Primary Residential Custodian. The other parent usually has unsupervised visitation of the children and is typically obligated to pay the primary custodian child support. Often the Primary Custodian is not the better fit. If you believe you are the better fit as the Primary Custodian, then it's your responsibility to prove why. Maybe your ex is living a lifestyle that is not conducive to having primary custody because they are living a lifestyle that is not conducive to such. If you believe they are engaging in irresponsible, immature, unethical, or illegal activity, then Child Custody Surveillance will be valuable. Maybe your ex is not spending quality time with the children and instead permitting others to care for them. Perhaps your ex is a partier and possibly drinking and driving. Maybe your ex has wrong priorities; they could prioritize their new relationship (girlfriend/boyfriend) over the relationship s/he has with the child; in other words, maybe they are putting their girlfriend/boyfriend ahead of the children. Possibly in the extreme example, they are engaging in drug abuse. Regardless of the lifestyle issue, it needs to be proven. 1-man companies will get caught very quickly and will not successfully build a successful case; these cases take time, and if your ex keeps seeing the same vehicle day after day, then they will undoubtedly catch on. Magnum Investigations deploys a team of investigators who work together simultaneously but from separate vehicles. This ensures the maximum success of obtaining photo documentation of the activity without your ex ever realizing they were under surveillance. These cases are NOT won via an attorney; instead, they are won by the investigative proof that a seasoned investigation agency obtains. Attorneys are a big waste of money; in the end, the outcome will be no different than had you represented yourself. Supervised visitation is just that, it's when your ex has visitation, and it's supposed to be supervised. Often, the supervisor will be present at the transfer; however, shortly after that, the supervisor will either leave or your ex will go. It's a big sacrifice for a supervisor to stay the entire time, and therefore the supervisor will usually leave the residence, and then your ex is alone with the child. Sometimes, the ex will leave the child alone with the supervisor, so they can engage in their interests instead of spending quality time with the child. In either scenario, it's a violation of the court order, and they can be held in contempt, usually resulting in a revocation of visitation. Of course, the supervisor will return shortly before the next transfer providing the illusion that they were there the entire time. The only way to prove these violations is via a licensed investigation agency with the skillset, manpower, equipment, vehicles, and experience. 1-man companies will raise suspicion among the neighbors; soon enough, everyone will know the investigator is there.
